Pegasus Path

You’re in the driver’s seat with Pegasus Path, a new tool that helps you map out your academic experience from orientation to graduation.

Pegasus Path pulls information from myKnight Audit to help you plan what courses you want to take, ensuring that you graduate on time.
Access the tool

You can find the tool on mobile by logging in to the UCF Mobile app and navigating to the Pegasus Path icon.
Once you’ve accessed the app, you’ll see several functions listed at the top that allow you to view and change parts of your Pegasus Path.
Edit my Terms and Units

This is where you can see your completed units (credit hours) from previous semesters. In the future units section, you can set target units for any remaining semesters.

These planned units are initially chosen by Pegasus Path.
Arrange My Plan

This is where you can drag and drop your courses/tasks between semesters.

If you move a course or experience in a way that is not recommended, a popup will appear or the semester will be outlined in red.
Pegasus Path Report

Here students can see the recommended sequence for their program.

It shows the requirements that they have completed, in progress, planned or still need to complete. It also shows their grades for those courses and the units.
More

Selecting the More button brings up other options for the tool.

These options are defined in the Pegasus Path glossary located in the interactive user guide.
My Areas of Study

If you scroll down past the blue buttons located at the top, you will see a section titled “My Areas of Study.”

This section lists your degree program(s) and tracks if there are any. It also lists your catalog year (your academic year at UCF).
Preferences

The changes you made in the “Edit My Terms and Units” section should be reflected here. It is an overview of the amount of units you plan on completing in each remaining semester.
Information

This section just highlights what the rest of the main page includes.
Below the information section, you can see the plan you have created semester by semester.

Clicking the arrows located in the upper right corner will display icons. These are defined on the following page.
